The Guilty

Will Robie is the government's most professional, disciplined, and lethal assassin. He infiltrates the most hostile countries in the world, defeats our enemies' advanced security measures, and eliminates threats before they ever reach our shores.

But now, his skills have left him. Sent overseas on a critical assignment, he fails, unable to pull the trigger. Absent his talents, Robie is a man without a mission, and without a purpose.

To recover what he has lost, Robie must confront what he has tried to forget for over twenty years: his own past.

Assassin's Honor:

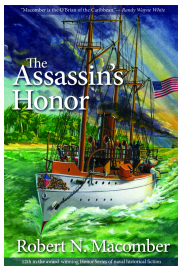

Thursday, December 10 at 7 PM

Admission is Free

Robert N. Macomber is an internationally recognized, award-winning maritime writer, lecturer, and television commentator. He is the author of the acclaimed Honor Series of naval novels and is proud to have readers in ten countries. His awards include the Patrick Smith Literary Award for Best Historical Novel of Florida (At the Edge of Honor), and the John Esten Cooke Literary Award for Best Work in Southern Fiction (Point of Honor). His sixth novel, A Different Kind of Honor, won the highest national honor in his genre: the American Library Association's 2008 W. Y. Boyd Literary Award for Excellence in Military Fiction. Each year Macomber travels approximately 15,000 sea miles around the globe, giving lectures and researching his novels.

Assassin's Honor

In 1892, Commander Peter Wake has left the world of espionage behind and is back in the sea-going navy. But duty has called him from his new Spanish lover back to Key West to investigate an assassination and prevent another one, all of which leads him to old German foes in Mexico as well as Spanish ones in Cuba and Tampa. The life of the great patriot of Cuba, José Martí, is at stake.

Book Reviews

Playing With Fire

By Tess Gerritsen

Reviewed by Cheryl Kravetz

While browsing through an antique shop in Rome, violinist Julia Ansdell discovers an old and dusty sheet of music called the Incendio Waltz. As she reads the haunting melody, she knows she must have it. When she gets home and plays the music it seems to have a terrible effect on her small daughter - Julia trips on the stairs and the family pet is violently killed.

Confused at the response her daughter has to Incendio, Julia goes back to Italy where she sets out to find the author of the music and discover just what it means.

Her search leads her to Venice, where she discovers an ancient secret revolving around a very powerful and very dangerous family.

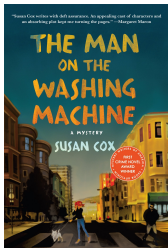

This haunting story is a departure from Gerritsen's popular Rizzoli and Iles novels and it is a testament to the author's wonderful skill for weaving a tale of mystery and intrigue. I enjoyed this book very much. Random House 28.00 St. Martin's Minotaur Books 2015 1st ed 1st printing. Signed by Cox on the title page. $25.99.

The Man on the Washing Machine

By Sue Cox

Reviewed by Joanne Sinchuk

Winner of the Minotaur Books/Mystery Writers of America First Crime Novel Competition, Sue Cox has written a charming, witty first mystery in a delightful series. Theophania Bogart (Theo for short) is hiding in San Francisco to escape a family scandal. She owns a bath and body shop named Aromas, lives above the shop, and encounters those interesting neighborhood characters only a place like San Francisco can produce.

Theo is a level-headed protagonist with an English sense of humor, serving as a hub of a group of eccentric friends and neighbors. While sipping her morning tea one day, she sees the local handyman fall to his death out of a neighbor's window. A few days later, his ex-wife, and Theo's best friend, is found dead at the bottom of a compost pile. And Theo comes home to find a strange man standing on her washing machine.

As Theo sets off to find the killer, she finds love, her grandfather, and more about her neighbors than she cares to know. All the while trying to keep her own salacious history in the deep, deep past. I can't wait til the next book to find out exactly what her past involves.

Crimson Shore

By Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child

Reviewed by Cheryl Kravetz

Special Agent A.X.L. Pendergast and his ward Constance Greene, are called to Exmouth, Massachusetts to investigate the theft of a priceless wine collection. A collection, by the way, that Pendergast recognizes.

While searching the wine cellar for any clues that may have been left behind by the thief, Pendergast finds remains of a human skeleton behind a brick wall. And to make things even more exciting, he and Constance learn that during the 1692 Salem witch trials the real witches fled to Exmouth, where they made their new home in the surrounding salt marshes and continued to practice their craft. As Pendergast searches the marshes, he finds a murdered corpse floating in the water, and the only clue is a group of unusual carvings.

Agent Pendergast is one of my favorite fictional characters. He is a true Southern gentleman who can match wits - and win - against even the most accomplished criminal. Crimson Shore is true Preston and Child, keeping the reader on edge until the electrifying end. Hachette 27.00
